Grammar Practice of the Week: Compound Sentences

A compound sentence is two complete sentences joined together. Often, you use and or but to join the two sentences. Use a comma before the joining word in a compound sentence.

Circle the correct joining word in each compound sentence:

1. Jiro San showed Taro how to feed crabs, (and/but) he taught him to dive for sponges.
2. The boy and the old man swept the beach, (and/but) they collected litter.
3. Taro waited patiently; (and/but) the turtles did not come.
4. Some people thought Jiro San was weird, (and/but) he was Taro's friend.
