Your Introduced Species Presentation

When planning your presentation, remember:

1. All the members of your group must participate.

2. Since any group member may be asked to answer questions from the class, all group members should fully understand the report.

3. Your presentation time is limited.

4. Many people learn best from a mix of visual, written, and spoken information. Include graphs and maps when possible.

5. While you will have your own opinions on this issue, it is important that you present unbiased and complete information. Your audience can then make their own decisions.

6. You may want to play the role of different experts when presenting your information, such as the people who might present to a city council meeting. The class would represent the community members who would be voting on a decision.
